Jeron Electronic Systems, Inc. Signs Agreement with Broadlane

Chicago, IL – Jeron Electronic Systems, Inc. announces it has signed an agreement with Broadlane, Inc., a leading provider of supply chain management services to the health care industry. As of March 1st, 2008, all Broadlane customers will have the ability to purchase nurse call systems directly from Jeron at negotiated prices. The agreement has a term of three years.

Jeron is proud to offer the health care market the cutting-edge Provider[®] 680 and 620 nurse call systems. The Provider 680 nurse call system, which is widely used in hospitals, is a sophisticated communication system that features IP connectivity. By streamlining the communication process, Provider 680 allows caregivers to stay in touch with their patients, and each other, while maintaining a strong focus on providing quality patient care.

Provider 620, an advanced tone-visual nurse call and emergency signaling system, embodies a variety of options for meeting specific communication needs. Call priority LEDs allow attendants to quickly and accurately triage calls at the master station. Health care facilities can also assemble vital staff members for codes or other emergencies using call centralization or pocket paging.

From its founding in 1965, Jeron has earned a solid reputation for innovative engineering, quality manufacturing, and service oriented sales support. Jeron products are manufactured in the USA at its Chicago headquarters.
